Hi all,

Just spoke with Millett and he is looking to send Anne I. home with a roll out document and a draft press release tonight. It sounds like she is flying out to Iowa in the AM to announce this.

We don't need to supply messaging just provide the updated volumes and relevant info so the materials can be very simple.

Sarah would like to take a quick look but we won't hold it too long for her.

Please work with Chris to prepare a draft early this afternoon.

Thanks,
Erin

Thanks for flagging this Jessie. I currently have a slide in the draft briefing that lays out several potential schedules with different assumptions for the length of the comment period, OMB review, a public hearing, etc. All of the schedules I have laid out assume we can have a notice signed by next Tuesday (10/8) and published shortly after (something line 10/10).

Subject: Timeline Considerations for RFS Supplemental

Hi all,

Just want to add a few timing considerations for tomorrow's discussion with Anne on the RVO Supplemental Notice. The

Ex. 5 Deliberative Process (DP)

We were also in communication with OP to make sure everyone was on the same page with regard to expediting signature and FR publication to open the comment period.

If there is any room in the materials for tomorrow to add a section on timing, we will need to make sure to add OMB review and FR publication. The FR publication timeline will help us in the IO to push OP and the AO for a quick signature. These items are also on Julia and my radar for tomorrow, so if we can't add these to the materials that isn't a problem, we will just bring it up when we discuss timing.

Let me know if any of you have questions on any of these timing concerns.

Best,
Jessie

Hi Team,

Just received an update from our policy team - we expect this to be signed "late" today, so I think that means between 5-6:30pm. Cc'ing Jessie and Julia here as they will keep us up to date on timing.

We do not have a final document yet, so that also is working against us. First, can we do anything right now to prepare (metadata, pub number, etc) to make the process as seamless as possible once we receive the doc?

Second, who has the availability/ willingness to stay late?

Third, can we give Jessie Admin. right to the pages below? It looks like Trish is out, so I'm guessing, no.

Finally, I cannot stay late tonight, but Jessie says she has the availability. If push really comes to shove, she can link the doc to the web (as she has managed pages in the past), but she may need Admin. rights to go live. Jessie, can you check right now on one of the pages below to see if you have the availability to post?

Hey All,

As mentioned earlier today, we plan to have the RFS Supplemental Notice be announced tomorrow. Time is still TBD, but we're told it could literally be any time, so I thought it would be best if we get something on the web as soon as possible.

If you remember (about a month ago) we put together the below staging pages. For the sake of time and simplicity, I went in and made the language edits.

I will send the notice document for formatting as soon as I receive it tomorrow (and let everyone know as soon as possible what time we anticipate signature).

Here are the staging links:

Hi Ann,

I wanted to check-in and see if you know of any decisions that have been made with regard to timing and the form the supplemental RFS notice (or proposal) will take. With Ben out of the office this week, we just want to make sure we aren't missing anything that had been communicated only to him or Sarah.

Also, Julia and I have been running traps at the staff level in preparation for a quick-turnaround review at OMB and Administrator signature next week. If you have a minute today, perhaps we could touch base to make sure we are checking all the right boxes there? I know you were also looking into this.

Obviously everything depends on timing, but if the rule is indeed signed next Tuesday, most of us are in Ann Arbor so we want to make sure that things can move smoothly. Courtney will be here in DC to print and deliver the package.

Best,
Jessie

Morning Jessie. Yes, I am checking on the timing as well but haven't gotten any new information since yesterday. I sent word to the OA that it could come through quickly next week. I'm in RTP but could get on a call at the end of the day, 4:30ish to check in—I may have more information by then. Does that time work for you all?

Hi all,

I took a very rough crack at this based on the current draft of the notice, in the event it might be useful. Feel free to start from scratch if this is way off target.

I've also attached the Typesetting Request, which we will need to fund and have signed by Tuesday.

Cc'ing Courtney as I anticipate Ben will want to review the typesetting request when he's back in the office next week.

Hi Mary and Sherri,

I wanted to let you both know that we've been given some direction on the Supplemental for the RFS 2020 Rule. At this point, we are looking at a very compressed timeline for signature, which is projected for Tuesday of next week. However, we do not yet have firm direction on whether this will be a supplemental notice or supplemental proposal. When I have more information tomorrow, I will follow-up.

Our estimated timeline for OMB Review, Signature, and FR Publication (as of this evening):

Friday, Oct. 4th – EPA sends preliminary draft to OMB for quick-turnaround review

Monday, Oct. 7th – Incorporate OMB edits

Tuesday, Oct. 8th – Administrator's Signature

Friday, Oct. 11th – Federal Register Publication

Please let me know if you have any questions.

My apologies for either under or over including folks on this email, but we wanted to make sure we were all on the same page regarding the timing of signature and public posting of the supplemental 2020 RVO proposal. Specifically, we recommend signing the supplemental proposal no later than this Friday October 11, and posting a signed version to the EPA website no later than October 15.

Ex. 5 Deliberative Process (DP)

Timing:

I completely forgot that 10/14 is a holiday, so it will add one more day. I have also been informed that OFR is backed up, so the usual 3-4 day processing and FR publication date turn-around can not be assumed.

Have a good weekend, and week in MI.

Good Afternoon,

OAR no longer plans to send the draft of our Supplemental Proposal for RFS to OMB this evening.

Ex. 5 Deliberative Process (DP)

Ex. 5 Deliberative Process (DP)

Ex. 5 Deliberative Process (DP)

The timeline for signature and FR publication has also now shifted. I've roughly outlined our most ideal/ambitious schedule, however, we recognize that OMB review may take longer pending any new reactions on content from other federal agencies.

Ex. 5 Deliberative Process (DP)

Ex. 5 Deliberative Process (DP)

10/9 – OAR sends OP for signature

10/15 – FR Publication*

*Please note this timeline is no longer as constrained as we believed earlier today, but if Signature is moved back to 10/10, we would ideally like to see FR publication on 10/16 to make the required notice timeline for our hearing while also not pushing us too far behind schedule. As is, we are already missing a statutory deadline, but EPA committed on a press call today to completing this rule by the end of the calendar year. This will not be possible if the hearing date is shifted further.

Best,
Jessie

Sarah asked me to get a meeting on her calendar for today. Please find the meeting request attached.

It looks like 1-2pm would work and is preferred. But we could also take 30 min from 3-3:30.

Thanks!

Upcoming Major Decisions and Events

SmartWay Awards: Next week, EPA will honor 72 truck carriers, logistics providers and freight shippers as industry leaders in supply chain environmental and energy efficiency with its annual SmartWay Excellence Awards at the 2019 American Trucking Associations Annual Management Conference & Exhibition in San Diego, California. The awardees represent the top one to two percent of companies that participate in EPA's SmartWay Partnership and demonstrate how businesses in this important sector can save on fuel costs, shrink their emissions footprints and contribute to healthier air in the communities they serve.

State Implementation Plan (SIP) Lean Guide: This week, the SIP Lean Team anticipates sharing the SIP Lean Guide with state, local, and tribal air agencies for informal air agency review, with comments requested by October 31. Developed following a lean event, the document is focused on supporting early engagement between EPA and air agencies during the SIP development process.

Children's Health Month: During Children's Health Month, ORIA will deliver a series of technical assistance webinars to promote Indoor Air Quality (IAQ) in Schools. The webinars are designed to deliver important content efficiently and keep stakeholders engaged for more in-depth learning.

Argus direct

EPA plan disappoints biofuel makers, refiners

15 Oct 2019 18:22 (-04:00 GMT)

Houston, 15 October (Argus) — The US Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) today stunned biofuels groups by announcing a new policy granting small refineries partial waivers of US renewable fuel blending requirements.

Agribusiness groups immediately denounced as a betrayal of a deal President Donald Trump negotiated less than three weeks ago a change they had sought for years. The policy revision could limit relief from repeated cuts to renewable fuel blending mandates that Trump had promised to halt.

"Once again, EPA is sending a signal to the biofuel industry that the volumes it sets in annual rules cannot be trusted," National Biodiesel Board vice president of federal affairs Kurt Kovarik said.

RFS requires that refiners, importers and certain other companies ensure minimum volumes of renewables blend into the gasoline and diesel they add to the US road transportation supply. Obligated parties acquire renewable identification numbers representing each ethanol-equivalent gallon of blended fuel, called renewable identification numbers (RINs), to prove compliance with the law.

EPA may exempt refineries that process less than 75,000 b/d of crude and that can show the agency and the Department of Energy (DOE) that the program creates a hardship. EPA historically has reduced overall requirements instead of shifting these exemptions to larger peers and competitors, going well beyond DOE advice. Such exemptions surged during Trump's tenure, slashing a record 9.4pc of mandates for the 2017 compliance year and in August reducing 2018 requirements by 7.4pc.

An agreement announced in early October that EPA and the Department of Agriculture both credited Trump for reaching would have limited future reductions. Both refining and agribusiness sources expected the administration to begin accounting for projected exemptions in their annual mandates, based on an average of the previous three years of exemptions. That would have required accounting for 1.4bn RINs in 2020.

Trump referenced that volume at a 7 October trade event.

"That's a lot of gallons," Trump said. "They should like me out in Iowa and all of the different places."

But EPA today proposed to follow DOE recommendations the agency has repeatedly ignored to project its future exemptions. And EPA would change a policy it defended as recently as August to waive either all of a refinery's obligations, or none of them.

"This allows EPA to more precisely calibrate its RFS policy, and to strike an appropriate balance between furthering the production and use of renewable fuels while granting relief to small refineries that meet the statutory criteria," the agency said.

The combined changes meant that EPA estimated it will waive a total of 770mn RINs for 2020, a little more than half the 1.4bn RINs that agribusinesses thought would be waived. EPA waived 1.4bn RINs last year.

Biofuels, farming and blenders immediately denounced the idea, calling it a "bait and switch" that undermines Trump's deal. Nothing required EPA to hold to the smaller estimated level of exemptions, and they questioned the timing of the agency's new direction.

"Today, the administration took back two-thirds of what it promised just a week ago, and the irony is rich," the Advanced Biofuels Association said.

Refiners condemned the plan for raising costs and forcing higher compliance from companies already meeting program obligations. The administration had other options to help agriculture, American Fuel and Petrochemical Manufacturers president Chet Thompson said.

"EPA's proposed RFS adjustments would be a painful affront to US refiners and the manufacturing workers the president promised to support, and do nothing to address the real source of what currently ails the biofuel and agriculture industries, the trade war with China," Thompson said.

The agency will hold a public hearing on the proposal on 30 October in Ypsilanti, Michigan. Public comment will continue until 29 November.

Federal statute requires EPA to finalize 2020 obligations by 30 November, but the agency missed that deadline repeatedly under President Barack Obama. Deputy agriculture secretary Stephen Censky today voiced confidence that the EPA will complete its final year by the end of the year.

Changes would still be made in time for 2020 obligations and done in such a way as to ensure the proposal survives inevitable lawsuits, he said.

"I think that provides greater legal certainty as we move forward," Censky said on the sidelines of the Global Ethanol Summit in Washington, DC.

Subject: EO 12866 Interagency Review: EPA's Renewable Fuel Standard Program: Standards for 2020, Biomass-Based Diesel Volumes for 2021, and Other Changes (RIN 2060-AU42)

Colleagues,

Attached are interagency comments on the EPA's supplemental NPRM entitled "Renewable Fuel Standard Program: Standards for 2020, Biomass-Based Diesel Volumes for 2021, and Other Changes." The bullets below highlight some of the items in the attachment.

- We do not agree with the inclusion of the alternative as drafted. We believe there is no rationale for using older data and the alternative is inconsistent with the WH decision last week to ensure that more than 15 billion gallons of conventional ethanol be blended into the nation's fuel supply beginning in 2020;
- We recommend requesting comment on an alternative that is based on the actual SRE issued during the period 2016-2018. This alternative is consistent with the decision to ensure more than 15 billion gallons of conventional ethanol. It is also grounded with actual historic data and gives greater consideration and weight to past practices.

Please let me know if you have any questions or would like to schedule a call with reviewers to discuss.

All the best,

Danielle

Hi Team,

Just received an update from our policy team - we expect this to be signed "late" today, so I think that means between 5-6:30pm. Cc'ing Jessie and Julia here as they will keep us up to date on timing.

We do not have a final document yet, so that also is working against us. First, can we do anything right now to prepare (metadata, pub number, etc) to make the process as seamless as possible once we receive the doc?

Second, who has the availability/ willingness to stay late?

Third, can we give Jessie Admin. right to the pages below? Ex. 6 Personal Privacy (PP)

Finally, I cannot stay late tonight, but Jessie says she has the availability. If push really comes to shove, she can link the doc to the web (as she has managed pages in the past), but she may need Admin. rights to go live. Jessie, can you check right now on one of the pages below to see if you have the availability to post?

Hey All,

As mentioned earlier today, we plan to have the RFS Supplemental Notice be announced tomorrow. Time is still TBD, but we're told it could literally be any time, so I thought it would be best if we get something on the web as soon as possible.

If you remember (about a month ago) we put together the below staging pages. For the sake of time and simplicity, I went in and made the language edits.

I will send the notice document for formatting as soon as I receive it tomorrow (and let everyone know as soon as possible what time we anticipate signature).

Trump weighs ethanol boost, limit to refiner exemptions from biofuel rule, sources say

By Eric Wolff

09/13/2019 05:26 PM EDT

The White House is considering a plan that could limit the number of small refinery exemptions to the Renewable Fuel Standard, increase the volumes of biofuels that must be blended into gasoline and boost the spread of 15 percent ethanol fuels, four industry and other sources familiar with discussions tell POLITICO.

The sources cautioned that the details of the plan aimed at easing tensions with corn farmers are still under discussion and could change before they are publicly released, which had been expected as early as Friday but is now expected next week.

The biggest win for biofuel producers would be a limit on the number of exemptions EPA grants to small refiners from blending mandates under the RFS. Though the exact details are still being ironed out, but the ethanol volumes exempted from the program would be limited to the average from the previous three years. That would prevent EPA from hiking those exemptions to wipe out increases it sets in the annual blending mandates, sources said, and make the program more predictable for markets, they said.

The deal under consideration would also include the previously reported addition of 500 million gallons of ethanol and 500 million gallons of advanced biofuels to the 2020 blending mandate currently under review at the White House. It will also add 250 million gallons to the 2021 biodiesel mandate, which is set a year ahead of the other volumes.

The plan would allow gas stations to use their normal E10 pumps to sell 15 percent ethanol fuel, another victory for biofuels producers because it would save retailers from having to install new equipment to sell the higher blend. EPA earlier this year proposed eliminating the summertime ban on selling E15.

A group of senators from refining states, including Sens. Ted Cruz (R-Texas) and Pat Toomey (R-Penn.) had been expected to meet with President Donald Trump Friday, but one of the sources said that meeting was postponed to next week. The senators are expected to press Trump to put a cap on the price of compliance credits, called Renewable Identification Numbers, though some sources said the White House was opposed to that move.

Trump has been pushing to develop a package that would mollify farmers already battered by his trade war with China and angered by his decision this summer to exempt 31 refiners from the biofuel mandates.

Production of Confidential Business Information in Civil Litigation: As early as this week, Acting Assistant Administrator Idsal will sign the action, Production of Confidential Business Information in Civil Litigation. This action provides notice of disclosure in civil litigation of information which has been submitted to EPA by owners/operators of oil and natural gas facilities that is claimed to be, or has been determined to be, confidential business information (CBI). Disclosure is in response to discovery requests from plaintiffs in this litigation. The court has ordered EPA to complete document production by November 8, 2019. EPA has agreed to provide rolling production of the documents. EPA cannot include any documents containing CBI until this notice is published.

Ethylene Oxide Update Letter: This week, OAR will send an update letter on the status of ethylene oxide-related activities, including rulemaking actions and area-specific activities. The letter, to be sent in response to past and present Congressional letters, will present the status of the Miscellaneous Organic NESHAP (MON),

Justin,

Thanks. I tried to call Alex right after I got off the phone with you, but he didn't pick up. I'm thinking that maybe he was talking to you at that moment.

Meanwhile, I've talked to Ann C. about this, and she in turn has already been in contact with Bill Nickerson in OP. So I think the full length of skids has been greased.

Hi Ann,

Here is the latest clean version of the Supplemental Notice for OAR review. Justin and David had us pull an earlier version this morning, but please note this is the version that OAR should review, as it is the most up to date.

Given our short timeline to get this over to OMB, we will do our best to incorporate any edits received by 2pm. After this time, it will be very difficult to incorporate edits and get the latest version to OP for upload to ROCIS.

Please let me know if there are any questions that come up in review.

Hi Ann,

Here is the latest clean version of the Supplemental Notice for OAR review. Justin and David had us pull an earlier version this morning, but please note this is the version that OAR should review, as it is the most up to date.

Given our short timeline to get this over to OMB, we will do our best to incorporate any edits received by 2pm. After this time, it will be very difficult to incorporate edits and get the latest version to OP for upload to ROCIS.

Please let me know if there are any questions that come up in review.

Best,

Hi Alex,

Per our conversation and your request, attached is the latest clean version of the supplemental notice for the 2020 RFS standards for you and Anne. As I mentioned on the phone, this is the version that could go to OMB today, however, it does not include any feedback from the OAR IO, including David Harlow's latest edits. That feedback will have to be incorporated at a later time.

Please let Sarah or I know if you or Anne have any questions.

Thanks!

By Eric Wolff

09/10/2019 01:36 PM EDT

Sen. Chuck Grassley (R-Iowa) blasted EPA again today for issuing dozens of biofuel waivers to oil refineries, saying former President Barack Obama had never backed the oil industry over ethanol producers the way the Trump administration has.

"It wasn't a problem for Obama to decide he didn't need to give 30 waivers," Grassley told reporters. "Something happened that [former EPA chief Scott] Pruitt got into the head of the EPA and the big oil had a big arm running EPA."

Under Trump, EPA has granted refiners more than 30 waivers for each of the 2017 and 2018 compliance years, freeing them from the requirements to blend biofuels as required by the Renewable Fuel Standard. That is far higher than seven or eight waivers per year the Obama EPA typically granted.

Grassley steered clear of blaming Trump, and instead pointed to the oil industry's influence.

"I think we got some evidence there's people in the White House advising the president, he probably doesn't know, but they're a tool for big oil and the refineries," he said.

Trump has held several White House meetings on ethanol policies, but so far failed to quell anger among corn farmers and ethanol producers who have seen prices for the biofuel plummet.

The administration is considering ways to try to boost biofuels consumption, but ethanol producers have said an additional 500 million gallons of ethanol and 500 million gallons of biodiesel that EPA may require next year is not enough to compensate them for the 1.4 billion gallons covered by the waivers Trump granted to refiners from the 2018 requirements.

Ethanol backers tell POLITICO they are seeking a cap on future waivers, and they want any new biofuels blending mandate to include the 500 million gallons that a D.C. Circuit ruling previously said should be added to replace volumes lost from unlawful 2016 waivers.

RFS UPDATE - NEW POTENTIAL REFORM PACKAGE

This afternoon, Bloomberg reported that on September 12, President Trump tentatively agreed to a plan that would reallocate small refiner exemptions (SREs) starting with 2020 renewable volume obligations (RVOs). The meeting included Senators Chuck Grassley (R-IA), Joni Ernst (R-IA), John Thune (R-SD), Mike Rounds (R- SD) and Ben Sasse (R-NE) as well as Iowa Governor Kim Reynolds (R-IA) and a biofuels industry representative.

Our understanding is that this latest proposal would have EPA reallocate exempted volumes to non-exempted parties when it sets the annual percentage RVO. It would do so by assuming some level of future SREs. The proposal suggests EPA assumes future SREs equal the average level of SREs over the prior three years. According to EPA data, the agency exempted ~1.35 B gal/Y on average of Renewable Fuel Standard obligations from CY 2016 through CY 2018, which is what we project they would assume in the 2020 RVO. Based on this understanding, we think, EPA could still create temporary RIN market slack by issuing more SREs in a given year than the prior three-year average, but non-exempted parties would have to compensate for it over the following three years.

In our September 6 note, RFS Reform – Pondering Packages, we noted that the administration was also considering a 500 M gal boost to both the advanced biofuel requirement and the implicit conventional ethanol mandate. If the package includes reallocation but drops the boost, we think the Renewable Identification Number (RIN) credit bank approaches pre-SRE average levels by 2023. If the package still retains the boost only for 2020, then the RIN bank could fall to the lower half of the range of scenarios we presented. If it retains some or all of the boost beyond 2020, it could reduce the RIN bank below that range.

As previously discussed, EPA explicitly stated it would not change its approach to SREs/reallocation in the 2020 RVO proposal. To do so now, the agency may consider first issuing notice and taking public comment.

As suggested by the Bloomberg article, we think this situation remains fluid. The unnamed sources could be leaking the information to shape the debate. Refining stakeholders, refining state Senators and agencies may have more input on the process. We note that refiners are pushing for the reform package to be paired with a RIN price cap, a proposal we have discussed in previous reports. We continue to monitor the situation and will provide additional analysis as appropriate.

Thanks John. Timing-wise - The package went to OMB last night. As I understand it, it could be cleared by OMB as early as late today for signature tomorrow but it's just as possible that it won't be signed until Friday, Tuesday at the latest.

EPA plan disappoints biofuel makers, refiners

15 Oct 2019 18:22 (-04:00 GMT)

Houston, 15 October (Argus) — The US Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) today stunned biofuels groups by announcing a new policy granting small refineries partial waivers of US renewable fuel blending requirements.

Agribusiness groups immediately denounced as a betrayal of a deal President Donald Trump negotiated less than three weeks ago a change they had sought for years. The policy revision could limit relief from repeated cuts to renewable fuel blending mandates that Trump had promised to halt.

"Once again, EPA is sending a signal to the biofuel industry that the volumes it sets in annual rules cannot be trusted," National Biodiesel Board vice president of federal affairs Kurt Kovarik said.

RFS requires that refiners, importers and certain other companies ensure minimum volumes of renewables blend into the gasoline and diesel they add to the US road transportation supply. Obligated parties acquire renewable identification numbers representing each ethanol-equivalent gallon of blended fuel, called renewable identification numbers (RINs), to prove compliance with the law.

EPA may exempt refineries that process less than 75,000 b/d of crude and that can show the agency and the Department of Energy (DOE) that the program creates a hardship. EPA historically has reduced overall requirements instead of shifting these exemptions to larger peers and competitors, going well beyond DOE advice. Such exemptions surged during Trump's tenure, slashing a record 9.4pc of mandates for the 2017 compliance year and in August reducing 2018 requirements by 7.4pc.

An agreement announced in early October that EPA and the Department of Agriculture both credited Trump for reaching would have limited future reductions. Both refining and agribusiness sources expected the administration to begin accounting for projected exemptions in their annual mandates, based on an average of the previous three years of exemptions. That would have required accounting for 1.4bn RINs in 2020.

Trump referenced that volume at a 7 October trade event.

"That's a lot of gallons," Trump said. "They should like me out in Iowa and all of the different places."

But EPA today proposed to follow DOE recommendations the agency has repeatedly ignored to project its future exemptions. And EPA would change a policy it defended as recently as August to waive either all of a refinery's obligations, or none of them.

"This allows EPA to more precisely calibrate its RFS policy, and to strike an appropriate balance between furthering the production and use of renewable fuels while granting relief to small refineries that meet the statutory criteria," the agency said.

The combined changes meant that EPA estimated it will waive a total of 770mn RINs for 2020, a little more than half the 1.4bn RINs that agribusinesses thought would be waived. EPA waived 1.4bn RINs last year.

Biofuels, farming and blenders immediately denounced the idea, calling it a "bait and switch" that undermines Trump's deal. Nothing required EPA to hold to the smaller estimated level of exemptions, and they questioned the timing of the agency's new direction.

"Today, the administration took back two-thirds of what it promised just a week ago, and the irony is rich," the Advanced Biofuels Association said.

Refiners condemned the plan for raising costs and forcing higher compliance from companies already meeting program obligations. The administration had other options to help agriculture, American Fuel and Petrochemical Manufacturers president Chet Thompson said.

"EPA's proposed RFS adjustments would be a painful affront to US refiners and the manufacturing workers the president promised to support, and do nothing to address the real source of what currently ails the biofuel and agriculture industries, the trade war with China," Thompson said.

The agency will hold a public hearing on the proposal on 30 October in Ypsilanti, Michigan. Public comment will continue until 29 November.

Federal statute requires EPA to finalize 2020 obligations by 30 November, but the agency missed that deadline repeatedly under President Barack Obama. Deputy agriculture secretary Stephen Censky today voiced confidence that the EPA will complete its final year by the end of the year.

Changes would still be made in time for 2020 obligations and done in such a way as to ensure the proposal survives inevitable lawsuits, he said.

"I think that provides greater legal certainty as we move forward," Censky said on the sidelines of the Global Ethanol Summit in Washington, DC.

White House hosts meetings seeking biofuel deal

11 Sep 2019 14:42 (-04:00 GMT)

Washington, 11 September (Argus) — White House officials invited refining companies and biofuel producers to meetings today in hopes of delivering on President Donald Trump's promise for an agreement on biofuel mandates, industry officials familiar with the meetings said.

Trump on 29 August pledged to release a "giant package" on ethanol policy that would please farmers and protect small refiners from the risk of closure. But that package has yet to be released, and White House officials are hosting meetings today to figure out what policy changes might be feasible for refiners and biofuel producers that have the most at stake from changes, industry officials said.

"They are looking for solutions and they are asking what would be a doable compromise," a refinery industry official said.

Individual biofuel producers and small- and medium-sized refiners were invited to the White House for separate events in the morning and afternoon, while industry trade groups were "cut out" of the meetings. It remains unclear if the administration has a package of proposed policy changes it will float at the meetings. The White House declined to comment.

The administration's push for a compromise is meant to bolster support from farmers and biofuel producers that have been struggling since Trump took office. Farmers have blamed Trump's trade disputes for lower crop prices, and their frustration boiled over when the US Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) said on 9 August it exempted 31 small refiners from their biofuel obligations for 2018. That removed requirements for refiners to blend 1.4bn USG of biofuels last year, equivalent to 7.4pc of the biofuel use mandated under the Renewable Fuel Standard (RFS).

Administration officials, aware of the anger from a key group of Trump's supporters, since then have discussed steps such as rescinding some of the small refinery waivers it recently approved, reallocating exempted biofuel volumes toward large refiners starting in 2020, and making it easier for retailers to sell 15pc ethanol blends (E15), according to officials following the talks. But those ideas fell flat with biofuel producers and farmers who believe the changes were insufficient.

"If rumors true this [would] be yet another disaster for ethanol and corn growers and [would] be bad politically for Republicans," US Senate Finance Committee chairman Chuck Grassley (R-Iowa) said last week on Twitter in a reaction to news of the plan. "Big oil strikes again."

Refinery officials argue the frustration over the small refinery exemptions is misplaced because biofuel consumption has not been reduced, and they say easing RFS burdens are equally important to union workers at small refiners. Those officials say they are urging the Trump administration to stop offering concessions on the RFS because they believe farmers and biofuel groups will always push for further changes.

But biofuel groups say the exemptions have undercut the RFS' intended purpose of encouraging demand growth for ethanol and other biofuels. They recently obtained documents showing EPA on 14 March allowed at least one refiner to avoid 100pc of its blending obligations in 2018, even though the US Energy Department had only recommended reducing its obligations by 50pc.

EPA and the US Department of Agriculture did not respond for comment.

Fyi – Politico blurb this morning -- ETHANOL DEAL AROUND 16 BILLION GALLONS: Trump said the next Renewable Fuel Standard rule will require "close to 16 billion" gallons of ethanol blending. EPA last week said it would exceed the 15 billion gallon statutory limit for conventional ethanol as part of its effort to reallocate gallons lost to small refinery exemptions. Trump touted the biofuels package at the signing ceremony for a Japan-U.S. trade agreement on Monday. "That is a lot of gallons," he said. "They should like that in Iowa and all the different places."

Would you like to take a look at this before it goes out? I'll work with folks to change the language on OMB review when it has concluded.

Attached is an updated draft of the action memo. I think this is close to a final version, but I'll note that there is language in this draft (highlighted) describing OMB review of this rule that we will have to update when we know what is going on there. I'm working on the typesetting request now and will send that to you shortly.

Hi all,

I took a very rough crack at this based on the current draft of the notice, in the event it might be useful. Feel free to start from scratch if this is way off target.

I've also attached the Typesetting Request, which we will need to fund and have signed by Tuesday.

Cc'ing Courtney as I anticipate Ben will want to review the typesetting request when he's back in the office next week.

Best,
Jessie

All—I just drafted the note below after a slew of phone calls I've had this morning. Please take a quick look and see if you have any edits/suggestions. I plan to share this with Sarah around 11 am. We'd copy Justin on the note. -- Ben
